You tripped every time we played net-ball he said. You're as clum-sy as hu-mans on ice. Ever since I could walk I've been slip-ping on bricks But that was-n't my game to be wor-ry-ing while they were hurrying back and forth across a hacking field

Back and forth I was busy saving the planet.

And
if you consider the choices I made At the time it seemed obvious now, much less so.

though I'm devising a plan for revising the reservoir I don't know. How the hack does that help me now though?

When you did all the right things Flit, you found the answer. But beware, tween you and well, it there lies the fence. You're a hacking he-ro-naut so jump it! Don't be dense...

When was the last time that you made an impact? Like, really an impact?

Switched out that semester from benching to math work From sans pedal speed-run to stats From flying and plying to guessing assessing sitting in lectures impressing with my professors professing "You're the only one. But it's justified, isn't it? To stay inside, lonely Flit. So long as you can admit you live without pride. But now that I'm all this way should

I have chosen to stay? And let airspace save the day. He's worse by my side. The plan- et is drying, lying in earth-books denying when all we need is some crying. No, I'm sell- ing my share and leaving the grieving to Green-x. no more deceiving, I mean ex-
